

Survey Report

We surveyed a group of 800 full-time employees across different organisations. At the time of the survey, respondents were either working remotely, or had recently returned to their workplaces after a period of remote work.

Some key highlights from the findings are below:

1. 67% participants wants flexibility to choose between remote work and work from office as per need
2. 77% of the respondents think office is necessary for work to happen
3. 83% of the participants believe that working from office enhances the productivity and leads to their professional and personal growth
4. 24% audience prefers to work from home 1-2 days/week
5. 70% of workers feel that they should spend less than an hour in their commute (to and from work)
6. 44% of employees would be happy to have offices near their hometown

Commute time is one of the biggest drawbacks the world is realising after the post-pandemic enforcement of work from home. Over 32% of the employees spend more than 2 hrs on daily commute.

A whopping 77% of the employees feel they need an office and the most popular reason for their likeness towards office is "Networking with colleagues"

What attracts you to work from home?

The rest 23% prefer working from home because they want to avoid long commutes.

What attracts you to come to office?

An organisation's welcome-back programs are specially directed towards the good 55% of the sample that feels more relaxed and financially stronger while working from home.

55% of the employees feel coming to office increases their manager's trust in their work while 66% of them still bring their A game to the table.

One predictable finding is that over 75% of the employees (managerial as well as non-managerial)- wants to come to office but with a choice of opting for remote work when need be. In other words, they want the best of both worlds. Qdesq can help you achieve the same along with a cost saving model. Connect with the team today!
